

Friday, 23rd October 2009

New hotel that created 10 jobs officially opened by mayor

Published Date: 31 July 2009

By Staff Copy

THE new Days Inn hotel at the Wetherby Service Station opened its doors to its first guests this week.

Mayor Edna Hilditch was chosen to officially mark the opening, before special guests were invited to view the new facilities.

The hotel has created 10 new jobs, while other work has been contracted to a local housekeeping agency and numerous people worked on the planning and construction phases.

Managing company Starboard Hotels is hoping the new accommodation will help boost visitors to the area.

Managing director Paul Callingham said: "It is great to see how well the hotel has been received, particularly from members of the local community.

"We have a great team in place here and I am confident that the hotel will be extremely popular with visitors.

"UK travel and low cost accommodation is becoming more important for families and businesses at the moment and the Days Inn offers superb modern facilities and a fantastic base for people to stay in the area."

The Mayor of Wetherby, Coun Edna Hilditch cuts the ribbon to open the new Days Inn Hotel at Wetherby. From left are Starboard Hotels operations director Philip Houghton, managing director of Starboard Hotels, Paul Callingham, Days Inn Hotel manager Ricky Lee and Burnley Holiday Inn Express deputy general manager Kim Eivind Crohn. (090728ARpic3)

ADVERTISEMENT

Business

Hurry, offer ends 31 Oct 09

Unlimited UK calls and texts for £20 per month.

FIND OUT MORE

© 2009 Orange T-Mobile